BREAKING NEWS

"All the news that is good"

Good News

War has not broken out!!

Everything generally fine

School day happens as planned - local kids grades go up

Every day the news is filled with stories about war, terrorism, crime, pollution, inequality, drug abuse, and oppression. And it's not just the headlines we're talking about; it's the op-eds and long-form stories as well. Magazine covers warn us of coming anarchy, plague, epidemics, collapses, and so many "crises" (famine, health, retirement, welfare, energy, deficit) that copywriters have had to decide to be redundant, serious.

Whether or not the world really is getting worse, the future of news will be determined by the nature of the information we want to take in.

News is not just what happens; it's what we want to know. It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about.

It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about.

It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about.

It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about.

It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about.

It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about.

It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about. It's the things that happen that we want to know about.
